

2-yr voice agreement with qualifying monthly data plan req'd.

Learn More
Free Shipping
Online Only

ADVERTISEMENT

Aol. | MAIL | You might also like: Daily Finance, Autos and More

Looking for a Job at AOL?

Aol Jobs.

Keyword(s)

City, State or Zip

SEARCH

In Partnership With
careerbuilder.com

Main CareerBuilder Find A Job Resume Center Interviews Salaries Education Center Articles & News Videos Send Us Feedback

You are here: Jobs > Articles & News > Whats New? Your Career, With Retraining

Whats New? Your Career, With Retraining

By Schools.com, Posted Mar 2nd 2012 @ 9:51AM

Text Size A A A

1 Comment

15 15 0 0 +1 0 Share Like

Getty

This article originally appeared on Schools.com

By Adam Stone

After a successful run as an entrepreneur, Sparrow Rogers of St. Michael's, Md. decided it was time for a change.

"I did a lot of reflecting on the entrepreneurial cycle, with all its very high risks and lots of pressure," said Rogers, 35. "I decided I wanted to find something that was both a profession and vocation. I wanted a career with a cause."

After launching and selling such companies as FastBite, Venture Lanes and MDTrex, Rogers turned her back on that lifestyle and returned to school at Loyola University of Maryland to work on a master's degree. She wants to be a teacher.

Here's to fresh starts

It's a difficult leap to make -- to walk away from a successful career and pursue something completely different. It takes courage, creativity and, more often than not, new training and education. On the up side, a fresh start can bring new satisfaction to one's working life, a chance to do what you're always really wanted.

A major career change can mean more money, depending on the move. It may mean a chance for professional growth, if you've gone as high as you can in your present field. Or it can offer an opportunity for personal enrichment. Here's your chance to study up on something you've always wanted to know and then to put that knowledge into practice.

Studying up likely will be part of the agenda for mid-career adjustments. "Any retraining will take from at least several months to a few years depending on a profession," Jindrich Liska, CEO of recruiting site Jobmagic.

Some career changers will go back to college for their bachelor's degrees or pursue an advanced education. Others will look for professional certifications to kick off their new ventures.

Don't quit that old job yet

Yes, going back to school will cost money -- perhaps the highest hurdle to a mid-career leap. "Every person who plans on a career in a new profession should definitely assess the temporary impact on both their finance and lifestyle," Liska said. Tuition, books and possibly housing will all take a bite out of the budget.

With this in mind, it can make sense to keep on working either part-time or full-time while chasing that dream.

"It is great if a person can keep the current job," Liska said. "However, even if a person keeps a job, he or she needs to take into account the lifestyle 'cost.' Besides the regular working hours, one will be spending significant time in a classroom and working on additional projects. This can very quickly suffocate the initial enthusiasm."

Burnout indeed can be a hazard to those "moonlighting" in the classroom. Financial aid helps ease the

What is the best non-prescription eyelash enhancer?

Provided by DermStore LLC

Are you snoring yourself to death?

Provided by My Snoring Solution

Shocking discovery for joint relief

Provided by Instaflex

Advertising by AP Lifestyle

ADVERTISEMENT

Search Jobs

Job Titles, Skills or Company Name

City, State or Zip

Search Jobs

Powered By careerbuilder.com

Related Videos

by 5min

Starting a New Career Search

Lenni Benson's Career Advice

Resume Writing for New Graduates

How to Discuss Your Salary for a New Job

Web2PDF

converted by Web2PDFConvert.com burden and begins with the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) This is the basic form the government uses to help decide whether you qualify for grants or other financial aid to cover tuition and fees.

For some, the financial burden will be doubled by that common curse of the recession: unemployment. The tuition bill may hurt, but for those without a job, a new for education may be the smartest thing to do.

"If you are out of work for any length of time, but you have been engaged in your pursuing your education, then you can say to an employer, 'I have been busy doing this,' rather than just being unemployed," said Dr. Edward Meyer, dean of the School of Professional and Continuing Studies at the College of Mount Saint Vincent in Riverdale, NY. "What have I been doing? I've been earning this new degree."

Worth the effort?

Consider the financial impact of a little retraining, even for those who swap careers within their existing field of expertise, according to Payscale.com.

- Use a computer science degree to join the rank and file of web developers at $51,400 or take on further schooling to become an IT business analyst for $80,500 a year.
- A psychology major can earn $49,400 as a mental health counselor, or train up to become a human resource manager and earn $61,300.
- An economics degree will draw $54,300 as a financial analyst, whereas specialized training can bump you up to $96,500 as an information technology project manager.

Once you've decided to begin the journey, which way should you turn? The web offers a lot of basic information regarding possible professions, schools and training programs. Just as valuable is the personal touch: Talk to those already in the field, commune with members of professional organizations.

"Go to professional meetings, organizations, seminars or conferences. Meet people and tell them you are considering a career change. Ask for their advice on how to break into your chosen new career. Look for learning opportunities offered by trade organizations," said Elizabeth Venturini, a college admissions advisor with Scholasticus.

Education and training take time and effort and money, but the payoff can be substantial in both professional and personal satisfaction.

"Once you have made your career change and have established yourself, you might find yourself much happier," Venturini said. You just may wonder: "What was I thinking to stay in my old profession for so long?"

Next: What Employers Wish You'd Learned In College

Don't Miss: Companies Hiring Now

Join AOL Jobs on Facebook | Follow AOL Jobs on Twitter

Stories from OnlineDegrees.com

- What Can You Do With A Marketing Degree?
- Teaching ESL Abroad: Your Ticket To Adventure
- Getting An IT Job: It's All About Networking

Filed under: Career Paths, Career Advice

Tags: career advice, career change, job training, new career

Schools.com

Schools.com is the definitive digital resource for education, connecting students and prospective students with the right information, people and schools to help them advance in life. By combining detailed career profiles with personalized interactive tools, the site helps each visitor find the ideal educational path. more...

Subscribe
E-mail
See All Posts

Add a Comment

Follow Us

Search Articles

Top Companies Hiring

Feb. 27 - March 3

Need a Job? See what companies added new job openings this week.

View Top 10 Companies Hiring

Categories

- ▶ Business Ideas
- ▶ Career Tests
- ▶ Confessions
- ▶ Cover Letter Examples
- ▶ Education
- ▶ Employment News
- ▶ Highest-Paying Jobs
- ▶ Hot Jobs
- ▶ Job Descriptions
- ▶ Now Hiring
- ▶ Part-Time Jobs
- ▶ Quizzes & Tests
- ▶ Resume Examples
- ▶ Seasonal Jobs
- ▶ Top Industries
- ▶ Top 10 Lists
- ▶ Unemployment Stories
- ▶ Work-From-Home Jobs

AOL Jobs on Facebook

Like

9,506 people like AOL Jobs.

What's Hot on AOL Jobs

Undercover Yet Again

The popular show is back for a third season.

Undercover Boss

Success Secrets

Celebs share the secrets to their success.

Secrets Of Success

 Sign in »

Type your comment here

*0 / 3000 Character Maximum

 Post on Facebook

Submit

1 Comment

Filter by: Newest angelsandpixies

Also, consider the region in which you live. Have all the human resource managers been laid off long ago and no one is hiring any new ones? Then, you will need to move if you upgrade your training to being a human resource manager, in order to gain employment in that field. If you live in an area that is hiring teachers again, like Las Vegas, get a teaching degree with certification, and you can live and work in your area. I think this article should have mentioned that you also have to decide if you want to move to get employed, fine. If not, check out what industry thrives in your area in order to become employed in your new career. Good luck.

10 hours ago

The Water Cooler

These stories are sure to give you something to talk about.

Silly Employee Stories

Featured Writers

Dan Fastenberg

David Schepp

Claire Gordon

Meet the full AOL Jobs editorial team

Sponsored Links

Free Job Training

Get paid while learning a new career! It's a win-win situation!

Finddu.com

The Art Institute Online

Turn Your Passion Into Your Profession. Learn More Today.

Alonline.edu

$86/hr Work

Work from Home. Legit Income. Free CD. BBB+ sixfigureprogram.com/FreeCD

Buy a link here

More on AOL Jobs

Office Humor

Take a break from the day-to-day and enjoy some office antics.

Confessions

Find out what it's like to work various jobs, first hand.

Resume Rescue

See how resumes have been revamped for maximum impact.

New Grads

From internships to first jobs, start out on the right foot!

Working Parents

It can be tough to juggle a career and a family. We're here to help.

Undercover Boss

We interview the bosses featured on CBS' hit show.

Aol Jobs.

Keyword(s)

City, State or Zip

SEARCH

AOL Job Hubs

Resumes & Cover Letters
Interview & Salary
Job Search
Career Research
Unemployment
On the Job

More on Jobs

My CareerBuilder
Create a Resume
Salary Center
Employment News
Job Outlook by City
Unemployment Guides
Job Alerts

Popular Industries

Accounting
Airline
Construction
Customer Service
Education
Health Care
Hospitality
IT
Retail Sales

Jobs Week

Jobs Week Main
Resume Contest
Ultimate Job Search Guides
Celebrity Coaches
Companies to Watch 2011
Faces of Unemployment

Job Searches

Search by City
Search by Company
Search by Job Title
Search by State
Search by Industry
Search by Type

More On AOL

Mail Search
Music
Movies
Mapquest
Cars
Money
News
Shopping

AOL Jobs offers the most comprehensive source of jobs through its partnership with CareerBuilder.com. AOLJobs is the place to go on the Internet for job alerts, employment information, career advice and job-seeking tools.

Site Map | Updated Terms of Service | Updated Privacy Policy | Trademarks | AOL Downloads | About Our Ads

© Copyright 2012 AOL Inc., All Rights Reserved.